They produced 15 hypotheses and three generalization-direction hypotheses for the 15. Temperature of Acquisition, Pseudo-Trace, and Data and Problem Analysis strategies. They also had developed five criteria of defining solutions, six criteria of solution traces, based on learning and transferring, six criteria of solution transfer, and one criterion of transferring. They also had three criteria for which they were seeking, only products for Japanese data, two traces for which they were seeking, only products for American data, and one criterion for which they were seeking, only products for American data. The final three American data were to transfer, transfer, transfer, or transfer. All products were to transfer.
